Human Rights Council 12th Session

Written Statement submitted by LRWC, a non-government organization in special consultative status.

Concerns about the Independence of Lawyers and Judges in Cambodia

1. Overview and recommendations:

There is marked increase of concern expressed by UN and other international and local human rights groups about persistent human rights issues that are seriously compounded by lack of independence and corruption of the judiciary, the bar and other public institutions including police. Courts are perceived to be among the most corrupt institutions in Cambodia.<sup>1</sup> The Bar Association of the Kingdom of Cambodia (BAKC) is widely perceived to be under government control, with concern about integrity in bar admission and disciplinary practices.<sup>2</sup> Issues of particular concern in Cambodia include: illegal land concessions, sales and evictions adversely affecting rural and urban people's rights and well-being, including indigenous peoples; violence against women and girls and trafficking of children and women for sexual exploitation; impunity for those threatening or attacking human rights defenders, union officials, journalists or opposition politicians, including corruption, pressure or judicial harassment by powerful persons; and constraint on freedom of expression and assembly through intimidation or judicial harassment of journalists, opposition politicians, human rights defenders and citizen protesters.

Executive control over the judiciary, prosecutors and the legal profession is accomplished through slow-paced and selective law reform, control over appointments and dismissal of judges and prosecutors, control of Bar admission practices, complaints against lawyers to the BAKC Bar Council with threats of disbarment, threatened or actual prosecution of lawyers, and impunity for physical threats to the safety of lawyers and human rights defenders.

LRWC urges the Human Rights Council to encourage the Royal Government of Cambodia to make urgent and serious efforts to implement its Legal and Judicial Reform Strategy, including accountable and rapid progress toward independent and competent courts. LRWC also urges the Council to urge Cambodia to bring all laws, policies and practices into line with Cambodia's Constitution and international human rights obligations, including passage of an anti-corruption law, Civil Code and Penal Code. LRWC also asks the Human Rights Council to encourage the Royal Government of Cambodia to invite the Special Rapporteur on Independence of Judges and Lawyers and the Special Rapporteur on the Situation of Human Rights Defenders to visit Cambodia on an urgent basis for detailed meetings with government officials, judiciary, bar association, members of the bar and human rights non-governmental organizations. LRWC also asks the Council to urge donors to Cambodia to insist that the Royal Government of Cambodia make rapid and diligent progress towards the Rule of Law and international human rights standards.

2. Cambodia's Legal Framework

2.1 UN Conventions: Cambodia has ratified many UN human rights Conventions, but has not ratified individual communications mechanisms.

2.2 Cambodia's Constitution: Cambodia's 1993 Constitution is a liberal democratic constitution which states in Article 31 that the Kingdom of Cambodia "shall recognize and respect human rights as stipulated in the United Nations Charter, the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the covenants and conventions related to human rights, women's and children's rights."<sup>3</sup> The Constitutional Council made a ruling in July, 2007 that "decisively affirms the position of the international human rights treaties as part of Cambodian law..."<sup>4</sup>

2.3 Patchwork domestic legal framework: Sources of Cambodian law are uncertain in many areas because of regime upheavals and changes since the 1970s. Some legislation has been passed since 1993 including a new Code of Civil Procedure, and Code of Criminal Procedure. There is a draft anti-corruption law, a draft Civil Code, and a draft Penal Code. The UN Transitional Authority in Cambodia (UNTAC) Penal Code<sup>5</sup> is still used. After international pressure,

UNTAC Penal Code Article 63 (defamation) was amended to remove custodial sentences, although heavy fines remain in place. UNTAC Penal Code Articles 62 (disinformation), 59-60 (incitement) continue to provide for custodial sentences and are now regularly used in addition to defamation charges. There is a 1995 Law on the Bar<sup>6</sup> and a Bar Code of Ethics.<sup>7</sup>

3. Concerns about key legal institutions

3.1 Courts: The Constitution stipulates independence of the judiciary.<sup>8</sup> However, the UN Special Representative and others have repeatedly noted that Cambodian courts are neither independent nor effective because of executive interference, corruption and lack of competence, leading to politically motivated prosecution of some and impunity of others. The Supreme Council of the Magistracy has been unable to carry out its Constitutional responsibility for integrity of the courts. The government published a Legal and Judicial Reform Strategy in 2003, but progress is disappointing.<sup>9</sup>

3.2 National human rights institutions: A Cambodian Human Rights Committee established by the government in 1998 is chaired Mr. OM Yien Tieng, an advisor to Prime Minister HUN Sen. This Committee is neither active nor independent. Discussions on an independent National Human Rights Institution (NHRI) began in 2006, but to date the mandate or powers of a NHRI have not been developed and there is no confidence that the government intends to establish an independent body in accordance with the Paris Principles.<sup>10</sup>

3.3 Extraordinary Chambers in the Courts of Cambodia (ECCC): The ECCC were set up by agreement as a mixed tribunal to try the leaders and those most responsible for the gross human rights violations of the 1975-1979 Pol Pot regime (Khmer Rouge). The ECCC has both international and Cambodian judges and prosecutors. There have been no transparent investigations of persistent allegations of corruption include reports that Cambodian staff have been pressured into kickbacks of their salary to government officials.

3.4 Prosecutors: Prosecutors have little independence from the executive branch of government and tend to make decisions based on partisan concerns rather than in the public interest. The 2008 Report of the UN Special Representative notes that “[c]omplaints filed by senior government officials, even when based on weak or unsubstantiated evidence, are prosecuted with vigour, while the vast majority of the populace have little hope or expectation of having their grievances taken up by public prosecutors.”<sup>11</sup> Criminal offences involving violation of land rights of communities by powerful individuals or companies are not prosecuted. However, when people resist evictions or appropriation of their land they or their lawyers may be threatened or charged with criminal offences such as incitement, disinformation or defamation.

3.5 Lawyers and the Bar Association of the Kingdom of Cambodia (BAKC): Efforts of the BAKC to foster an independent bar have been disappointing and have been impeded by government pressures and political divisions particularly over the past several years. Corruption and ineffectiveness of lawyers are reportedly widespread. The 1995 Law on the Bar governs lawyers in Cambodia and creates the Bar Association of the Kingdom of Cambodia. The Law on the Bar, which upholds the autonomy of the legal profession, provides a significant role for the Prosecutor General of the Court of Appeal who has considerable authority in decisions on bar admissions and disciplinary decisions of the Bar Council. There are reports of serious and widespread corruption in the bar admission process.

3.6 International and domestic NGOs including legal aid and human rights NGOs: Cambodia has a number of competent and robust legal aid NGOs and human rights NGOs who work in cooperation with the UN Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights and other international human rights and legal organizations and donors. Local NGOs have a great deal of expertise at documentation and reporting of human rights violations but rely on unstable foreign funding.

APPENDIX I
To
Concerns about Independence of Lawyers and Judges in Cambodia

Synopsis of key incidents since 2004

The following timeline includes incidents of concern regarding independence of lawyers and judges:

- 1995 to 2002: The first Presidents of the BAKC were Dr. SAY Bory (1995-1998), and Mr. ANG Eng Thong (1998-2002). In October, 2002, Mr. KY Tech, was elected President for a two- year term.
- September, 2004: Prime Minister Hun Sen and three other high-ranking CPP officials gained admission to the Bar even though they do not have the qualifications required by the Law of the Bar.<sup>12</sup>
- November, 2004: A legal aid lawyer from the Cambodia Defenders Project (CDP), Mr. SUON Visal, was elected president of the BAKC Bar Council, but incumbent President, Mr. Ky Tech sought to set aside the results citing irregularities in membership status of some junior lawyers who voted. The Appeals Court nullified the election and ordered that defeated incumbent, Ky Tech, reassume the presidency pending organization of new election. The election was postponed several times.
- February and August 2005 (and August 17 2009): In February 2005, the Municipal Court of Phnom Penh sentenced Mr. CHAN Sopheak for the murder of a union official, Mr. ROS Sovannareth. In August, 2005, the Municipal Court of Phnom Penh sentenced Mr. BORN Samnang and Mr. SOK Sam Oeun for the 2004 murder of a union official, CHEA Vichea. There was reportedly no evidence against those charged for these offences, and it is believed their convictions were shields for the true offenders believed to be still at large. In the case of the murder of Chea Vichea, Trials and appeals were widely considered to have been unfairly decided by judges not acting independently of the executive branch of government. Mr. Born Samnand and Mr. Sok Sam Oeun were finally released on bail December 31, 2008. Chan Sopheak's sentence was confirmed in February, 2009, despite the lack of evidence. An internationally observed appeal was heard August 17, 2009, in the Court of Appeal in which the court ordered a reinvestigation of the murder of Chea Vichea, but declined to acquit Mr. Born Samnand or Mr. Sok Sam Oeun despite alibi evidence and evidence of induced confession; the two men remain free on bail.
- October 16, 2006: The two-year dispute over the presidency of the BAKC was settled by election of Ky Tech as president for a two-year term until October 2008.<sup>13</sup>
- December 2005 to March 2006: In December, 2005, YENG Virak, director of the Cambodian Legal Education Centre, and others were charged with defamation and detained as a result of their participation in organizing a Human Rights Day event where a banner was displayed on which members of the public had handwritten comments critical of the government and Prime Minister Hun Sen. Others detained in this incident were Kem Sokha, Director of the Cambodian Center for Human Rights, Pa Nguon Teang (human rights defender), Mom Sonando (journalist) and Rong Chhum (teachers= union leader). They were released after considerable international advocacy. April 21, 2006: The government responded to international advocacy by agreeing to amend UNTAC Penal Code Article 63 (defamation) to remove the imprisonment penalty.

- March 2007: The BAKC attempted to subject foreign lawyers in the ECCC to extremely high fees in order to be allowed to practice in the ECCC. This led to concerns that persons accused in the ECCC would be denied freedom of counsel. After international advocacy, the fees were eventually renegotiated. This issue created delays in ECCC proceedings.<sup>14</sup>
- May 2007: Global Witness, an international NGO, reported that lawyer Mr. Ky Tech represents companies and persons closely connected to high ranking public officials. It was also alleged that Mr. Ky Tech was implicated in a threat to have a judge fired if he found in favour of the opposing party.<sup>15</sup> Neither government authorities nor the BAKC appear to have investigated this allegation.
- May 2007: BAKC officials took the position and made public statements that legal aid and human rights NGOs, including Community Legal Education Center (CLEC), Legal Aid of Cambodia (LAC) and the Cambodian Defenders Project (CDP) must sign Memoranda of Understanding (MOU) with the BAKC in order to employ lawyers.<sup>16</sup> Bar President Ky Tech also threatened to refuse Bar admission to trainee lawyers in a USAID-funded Law Fellows Program (LFP) which placed new lawyers in internships with human rights organizations. As a result, twelve trainee lawyers resigned from the LFP. The requirement of MOUs has no basis in law, and there was considerable concern that agreeing to MOUs would result in inappropriate limitations on NGOs providing legal assistance to poor people affected by illegal expropriation of their lands by wealthy or powerful persons. This stance of the BAKC has been withdrawn since election of a new Bar President in October, 2008.
- June to August 2007: There were several threats against human rights defenders, lawyers and journalists in 2007. Three lawyers from Legal Aid Cambodia (LAC) and seven lawyers from Cambodian Legal Education Centre (CLEC), all representing indigenous villagers in the Kong Yu land case, experienced threats to their safety. Also, complaints about the lawyers were made to the BAKC by the defendant in the case, Ms. KEAT Kolney, who is the wife of a prominent official in the Ministry of Land Management, Urban Planning and Construction, and the sister of Cambodia's finance minister, KEAT Chhon. Bar President, Ky Tech, denied placing the lawyers under investigation, but he reportedly called the lawyers to a meeting. The lawyers were also placed under investigation for the UNTAC Penal Code offence of incitement of the villagers they were representing to commit fraud. In August, 2007, the investigating judge reportedly warned the lawyers that the criminal investigation was not over and threatened defamation charges if they spoke to the media.<sup>17</sup>

- October, 2008: BAKC elections resulted in Mr. Chiv Song Hak being elected the new President of the BAKC.<sup>18</sup> Mr. Suon Visal was appointed as Secretary-General. Donors and potential partners are continuing to express grave concern about BAKC independence.
- January, 2009: ECCC defense lawyers Mr. Victor Koppe and Mr. Michiel Pestman called for investigation of allegations of corrupt practices at the ECCC and were reportedly threatened with defamation lawsuits by Cambodian ECCC judges
- April to July 2009: A lawyer, Mr. KONG Sam Onn, represented an opposition politician, Ms. MU Sochua, in a case against Prime Minister Hun Sen who allegedly defamed her. Kong Sam Onn attended a press conference to seek an apology and announce a forthcoming law suit by his client. After Kong Sam Onn commenced the lawsuit he was charged with defamation under UNTAC Penal Code Article 63 along with Mu Sochua. The lawyer for Mr. Hun Sen, Mr. Ky Tech, also filed a complaint against Kong Sam Onn to the Bar Council alleging unethical conduct. Kong Sam Onn also represented another opposition parliamentarian, Mr. HO Vann, who is charged with defamation and incitement. Mu Sochua's and Ho Vann's parliamentary immunity was lifted in a closed meeting of the National Assembly on 22 June 2009. On 18 June, the Bar Council made a decision that Kong Sam Onn had breached articles 4, 6 and 15 of the Bar Code of Ethics. Mr. Kong Sam Onn was reportedly under extreme pressure and wrote an apology letter to Mr. Hun Sen, withdrawing from representation of Mu Sochua and Ho Vann on July 7, 2009. Mu Sochua and Ho Vann are currently unrepresented.
- June, 2009: Journalist Hang Chakra was convicted in absentia and sentenced to one year in prison and a fine of 9,000,000 riels (US$2,167) under UNTAC Penal Code Article 62 (disinformation) after publishing articles in April and May 2009 that made allegations of corruption against government officials in the office of Deputy Prime Minister Sok An (who also chairs the Council for Legal and Judicial Reform). There are concerns about judicial harassment to suppress freedom of expression given that Hang Chakra was convicted under the UNTAC Penal Code instead of the more recent 1995 Press Law which contains appropriate offence provisions and safeguards press freedom.<sup>19</sup>
- August, 2009. In early August, a human rights worker with ADHOC, Pen Bonnar, who had worked with villagers in Rattanaki Province on land rights cases for nearly a

ADHOC reassigned him to another location in Cambodia.<sup>20</sup> On August 14 it was reported that police questioned two human rights workers, Ung Samith, from LICADHO, and Pen Bonlay, from Vigilance of Cambodia, after they helped distribute food to protestors in a peaceful demonstration at Banteay Meanchey provincial court. It was feared that the questioning was part of an investigation toward a charge of incitement.<sup>21</sup> On August 23, the government unofficially announced an intention to sue labour rights leader, Chea Mony, president of the Free Trade Union of Workers of the Kingdom of Cambodia, for defamation for statements that he made at the Appeals Court on August 17, 2009, that government authorities were behind the killing of his brother, labour rights leader, Chea Vichea.<sup>22</sup>
